

Funny Bones!

The following are actual statements found on insurance forms where car drivers attempted to summarize the details of an accident in the fewest possible words. The instances of faulty writing serve to confirm that incompetent writing may be highly entertaining,

“Coming home, I drove into the wrong house and collided with a tree I don’t have.”

“A truck backed through my windshield into my wife’s face.”

“The guy was all over the road. I had to swerve a number of times before I hit him.”

“In my attempt to kill a fly, I drove into a telephone pole.”

“I told the police I was not injured, but on removing my hat, I found I had a fractured skull.”

“I was sure the old fellow would never make it to the other side of the road when I struck him.”

“When I saw that I could not avoid a collision, I stepped on the gas and subsequently crashed into the side of the other car.”

“I pulled away from the side of the road, glanced at my mother-in-law in the other seat, and headed over the embankment.”

“I had been driving my car for 40 years when I fell asleep at the wheel and had the accident.”

“To avoid hitting the bumper of the car in front...I struck the pedestrian.”

“I first saw the slow-moving, sad-faced old gentleman when he bounced off the hood of my car.”

“The accident happened when the right front door of a car came around the corner without giving any signal.”

“The telephone pole was approaching fast. I was attempting to swerve out of its way when it struck my front end.”

“A pedestrian I did not see hit me, and then went sliding under my car.”

“The pedestrian had no idea which direction to go, so I ran over him.”

“I was thrown from my car as it left the road. I was later found in a ditch by some stray cows.”

“I thought my window was down, but I found out it was up when I put my head through it.”

“My car was legally parked as it backed into the other vehicle.”

“An invisible car came out of no where, struck my car and vanished.”
