A moving situation

A husband and his wife lived in Manchester, New Hampshire. One winter morning while listening to the radio, they heard the announcer say, “We will have 8 to 10 inches of snow today. You must park your car on the even-numbered side of the street, so the snowplow can get through.” The wife went out and parked her car on the even-numbered side of the street.

Later in the week they heard the radio announcer say, “We are expecting 10 to 12 inches of snow today. You must park your car on the odd-numbered side of the street, so the snowplow can get through.” The wife went out to park her car on the odd-numbered side of the street.

The next time they heard the same announcement, the wife said that she is getting tired of moving her car so often and really did not want to do it. The husband replied, “Why don’t you just leave it in the garage this time?”

We should all take a lesson from the snowflake. No two of them are alike; yet observe how well they cooperate on major projects, such as tying up traffic.

The direction of the total solar eclipse shadow (such as the eclipse shadow moving west to east from the Pacific Ocean to the Atlantic Ocean on April 8, proves beyond every doubt that the earth is the center of the universe and immobile. This video will prove it:
